Description

The Naval Research Laboratory (NRL) has a requirement for research and development support services that includes hardware and software system engineering, system analysis, component specification, and data collection and analysis. The contractor shall provide support in a variety of electronic warfare disciplines and related applications. This effort will focus on system research and development, software development (real-time digital signal processing, real time displays, and graphical user interface), radio frequency engineering and fabrication, assembly, integration and the testing of prototype electronic warfare systems. General design and development support (e.g. schematics, design documentation, user and operator manuals) and program management support will be required. The unique nature of this research requires access to NRL hardware, classified computing resources, and databases dictating that a major portion of the labor tasks be performed on-site at NRL. A detailed statement of work will be issued with the solicitation. The Government anticipates an award of a Cost Plus Fixed Fee (CPFF) term type contract. Access to classified information is not required for the purpose of submitting a proposal for this statement of work. However, prior to award of contract, the successful contractor will be required to have a Secret facility clearance, Secret storage capabilities, and personnel available with DoD granted personnel security clearances commensurate with level of access required for performance of contract. The anticipated period of performance is a basic award of twelve months with four 12-month options, if exercised. The anticipated level of effort is 19,890 for the basic contract and 19,890 for each option, if exercised. The NRL uses Electronic Commerce (EC) to issue Requests for Proposals (RFPs) and amendments to RFPs. Paper copies of the RFP will not be provided. All responsible sources may submit a proposal, which will be considered by the agency. See Numbered Note(s) 1, 26
